Tater Knob Pottery

Country at Home : Episode CAH-412 -- More Projects »

Sarah Culbreth and Jeff Enge share a bit of heritage. They are both graduates of the Berea College arts program. They also share a life, a son and a business as creators and owners of Tater Knob Pottery, crafting fine stoneware, particularly dinnerware. Culbreth and Enge talk about the process that goes into making stoneware, and pay special attention to items that are used to hold food. Of particular interest is the spoonbread baker Culbreth created several years ago that can go from table to freezer or refrigerator to oven. Each one is functional, and each one is a work of art.

The harder and more water resistant a piece of pottery is, the more useful it is.
